This guide to the Australian Bush Flower Essences is one of a range of handy reference documents designed to facilitate the use of Essences for personal healing. Flower and other vibrational Essences (gem, animal and environmental for example) are profound healing tools with the potential to make a significant contribution to our personal and spiritual development.

Our purpose at Healthlines is to support the spread of Essences by facilitation the understanding of these divine healing gifts, and by making them easily accessible to public and practitioners alike. We provide a prescription service so you can have several Essences made up into a ready-to-take dosage bottle. For further information please phone or visit our website.

AUSTRALIAN BUSH FLOWER ESSENCES

Ian White, creator of the Australian Bush Essences, can take a great deal of credit for the growth of interest in and understanding of essences over the last decade or so. His commitment to education and training, together with their effectiveness, has made his essences some of the most widely known and popular in the world.

The Australian Bush set comprises 69 essences. Each 'stock' bottle (concentrate) comes in a 15ml dropper bottle. To create a dosage strength bottle take 7 drops of the selected essence (or up to 5 essences) from the stock bottle and put them into a clean, empty, dropper bottle. Then top this up with a brandy solution (minimum 20% as a preservative). The standard dosage is 7 drops morning and evening from the dosage bottle, but this can be adjusted according to need.

As well as the individual essences, Ian has created a range of combinations in drops, mists and creams to help with particular life issues. These are listed at the end of this pamphlet, as are his books.

The Bush essences are easy to use to address the first level of healing, the issues that are most apparent or current. If you are new to essences, they are a good place to start as the descriptions are clear and accessible. You can expect to see good results fairly quickly, often within just a few days. It is, however, recommended that you take your essences for a good 2 weeks.

There are several ways of choosing essences, either consciously, by selecting from the descriptions, or by using one of several methods to access the unconscious or intuitive mind eg. dowsing or muscle testing. Another, very easy, way of doing this is with the Australian Bush Insight Cards, a powerful tool for intuitive prescribing. These beautiful images are printed on high quality glossy cards and we find them quite amazing. Again and again they demonstrate how we are intuitively drawn to the flowers we need for our healing. They are ideal for children and people who find it difficult to talk about their problems.

We would like to thank Ian for allowing us to use the Bush logo and flower photos reproduced here which are all copyright of Ian White.

HOW TO DILUTE ESSENCES

Most Essences are sold as 'stock' bottles, these are concentrates that you can dilute to make up a ready to take 'dosage' bottle. This means that the essences you buy will last a long time as you are only taking a few drops out to make up a bottle that will last for a while.

Many people take essences directly from the stock bottle and there is no problem with this, they just won't last as long.

To make up a dosage strength bottle of Australian Bush Flower Essences from the 15ml stock individual Flower Essences you would dilute 7 drops from each stock bottle, together, in an empty 30ml dropper bottle. We suggest using a 25% brandy or vodka solution to dilute as a preservative over the 3 or 4 weeks that you may be taking it but if you don't want any alcohol you can use spring water and keep it in the fridge. Alternatively you can use any other spirit, vinegar or salt to preserve it.
